MIND MEDS

BY GEOFFREY HOPPE

Today's hot topic – How can a person get off anti-depressant medications?

We just finished the two-day “Beyond the Mind” workshop here in Finland. It was the ideal workshop in every way. About 80 Shaumbra came from around Finland, as well as Romania, Germany, Switzerland, Norway, Denmark, France, Belgium and the UK. The venue was about an hour north of Helsinki, in a beautiful setting surrounded by lakes and forests. Our host, Irma Rantala, and her staff did a first-class job in handling all of the arrangements and details. And Adamus was spot-on with his message and delivery.

Much of Adamus' focus this past year has been about the transition beyond the mind, into the Body of Consciousness. This theme has been woven into recent monthly Shouds and he talked at length about it at the Mental Imbalance Symposium in southern California in April.

Neither Adamus or Tobias have dwelled on ascension “do not” lists, instead choosing to remind us to live fully and abundantly rather than bogging us down with a long list of things we shouldn't do. But at the top of both of their short lists is the suggestion (and only a suggestion) that Shaumbra should not take pharmaceutical medications for depression and anxiety. At the same time they mention that symptoms of depression, anxiety and loss can be part of the awakening process.

Their caution about anti-depressants came into the spotlight when Crimson Circle announced the Keahak Project. Part of the requirement for the 99 core Keahakers and the many, many Keahak energy supporters is that they do not currently take any medications for depression or anxiety, and have not taken any for the past 18 months. We received a lot of emails about this from people wanting to know why this requirement.

The simple explanation is that those participating in the Keahak Project – especially the 99'ers – will be integrating large new quantities of light/source energy into their Body of Consciousness. This could potentially have an adverse effect on anyone taking the mind meds, such as overloading and blowing out the mental circuitry.

Adamus was asked a question about this during our weekend in Finland. I felt a huge download of information so I closed my eyes in order to better concentrate. Here are excerpts from his reply:

“These (medications) block and/or distort the light-source to the brain, therefore distorting your reality and your concept of Self. Your mind will consider this to be reality and block out attempts from the I AM to remind the mind that this is not real. Perhaps one of the greatest dangers is that the medications block out these important reminders from the inner, divine. The medications interfere with these normal and important communications.”

We also received quite a few emails from people currently using the medications wanting to know how to get off them. The truly sad news is that we don't know of any highly effective treatments or therapies at this time other than gradual withdrawal. According to Adamus, the physical and psychic residue of the medications stays in the body/mind for up to 18 months. Body detoxification helps to a degree, but the mind also creates a dependence on the medications long after the chemical effects are gone. During the Finland workshop he suggested that "light therapy" could help to reduce the after-life of the medications and provide some other relief for users.

The prescription of mind meds is becoming more widespread around the world as more people experience stress in their lives, and more people are feeling the effects of spiritual depression during their awakening. According to a US government study, anti-depressants have become the most commonly prescribed drugs in the United States. They're prescribed more than drugs to treat high blood pressure, high cholesterol, asthma, or headaches. Ten percent of women 18 and older and 4 percent of men in the US now take antidepressants. According to one doctor interviewed by CNN, "Doctors are now medicating unhappiness. Too many people take drugs when they really need to be making changes in their lives."

The question about how to get off these drugs continues to roll over and over in my thoughts. Adamus has said that he will provide more specific details, but also wants Shaumbra to collaborate on this topic. Linda and I had dinner tonight with Danish psychiatrist Dr. Ole Nielsen and his wife Elaina. He and Elaina have attended all of the Mental Imbalance Symposiums (Colorado, Berlin and San Diego) and now the Beyond the Mind workshop here in Finland. We had a good talk about anti-depressant drugs and concluded that a lot more work needs to be done on both ends of the issue – what are the alternatives to prescription, and what can be done to assist people who want to stop taking them?

We'd love to hear from any Shaumbra who have personal or professional experience with this subject, and have created a special forum on the Crimson Circle message board specifically to discuss this topic. Who Are We — REALLY?

By Jean Adrienne—Awakening Zone Host

We live in a world of identity crisis. Never before in our history has there been so much identity theft. It happens so often that there are actual companies capitalizing on it with identity protection insurance. Even 15 – 20 years ago this would have been inconceivable! Part of the reason this is happening is that life is changing so rapidly now that many of aren't sure who they are anymore, and this insecurity invites predators to take advantage of it. It's the Law of Attraction playing out in the negative.

Each of us has a unique energetic signature. This is a frequency that is based on our individual truth, but it can become blurred if we lose sight of what truth is. This energy signature is as unique to us as the watermarked paper our currency is printed on. If we are secure with who we are it's impossible to counterfeit. If we are not, the door opens to allow fear to become a part of our makeup.

One way to shift this and secure your energy is to do a self-inventory, and you can start this process by defining what is important to you – so important that you would defend it at all cost. These are the components that make up your core value system. Make a list of the values you hold dear—honesty, unconditional love, integrity, peace...and as you create this list, think about each one carefully. Is it truly a part of your makeup, or is it something you have been told that you should have as a part of your standard of living. If it falls into the latter category, it's someone else's BS (belief system) and you are lying to yourself about who you really are. Again, according to the Law of Attraction, this will create the energy that will set you up for circumstances you don't really want to attract—other lies.

There is nothing wrong with using this exercise to grow personally. If you find a value on your list that isn't part of your makeup, but you are willing to raise your consciousness to allow it to become so, great. You will grow as you stretch to become more than you have been in the past.

A second piece of shifting yourself into your integrity involves releasing old wounds from the past, and this is done through forgiveness. Forgiveness releases the judgments we have stored and erases the associated karmic debt. This brings to mind two very basic questions: why did we make those judgments in the first place, and why have we been so attached to them that we would hold onto those old hurts and resentments for years or even lifetimes?

While we lived in duality, the making of judgmental thoughts was the natural outcome of any situation where we were hurt, slighted or did the same to someone else. Those thoughts became things back then just like they do today—things that either materialized as illness, pain or worse, or ones which merely stuck to us or hung in our fields as shapes we couldn't see. Basically these judgmental thoughts were tools that reinforced our beliefs that we were separate—from each other or even from Source.

If we'd been more aware, we would have just let these thoughts float away and been done with them, but more often than not, we hung onto every slight or hurt, the guilt, remorse or hate and missed the point of the lesson which presented them. So these lessons return to us, and with each reoccurrence, the stakes were raised and the tests got more painful. What if we had awakened and realized that all it ever took was to lay down the sword and walk away from the battle?

My mother used to say, “every time you win an argument, you lose a friend.” I don’t know if she understood the point she was actually making, but it was as applicable fifty years ago as it is today. Every time we become so attached to being right, we make someone else wrong. In an enlightened mind, we would never want to do that, but when we muddle through life half asleep, we forget that “our brother” is our self and if we make him/her wrong, we are negating our self, moreover, we are negating God. This is the age-old lesson of The Golden Rule.

Everything that has happened to us has the potential to be stored as a memory. Some instances have no charge on them because we processed the event but didn’t judge it. We simply accepted that it was. But the things that had an emotional component because we did judge them are stored within us. It doesn’t matter whether we judge an instance to be good or bad—the fact that we judged is what gave it importance and created an inner wound or belief system.

These wounds or belief systems are the foundational makeup of the emotional blocks that keep us from creating the things we want in our reality. If your manifesting techniques don’t seem to be producing the results you expect, you can bet that culprit is either an old wound from your past or a belief that is in opposition to your desired goal. Most of us are studying and focusing on conscious creation these days, and it can be frustrating when the tools are being used correctly and nothing seems to happen. Changing the present happens by clearing the inappropriate stuff from the past. It’s easy to do because it doesn’t exist anymore anyway, except in the space where you stored the memories.

Forgiveness must start with yourself. What are you judging about yourself? It might be about your physicality (I’m too ___ or I’m not ___). It might be related to your abilities or accomplishments. There is no order of magnitude in judgment. Forgive yourself. Then you can begin forgiving all others you have ever judged or blamed. What they did no longer matters, because the past is gone. It doesn't exist so actions from the past don't exist anymore either. The present moment is all we have. As soon as you can grasp this concept, forgiveness becomes easy. Think of all those old hurts like debts on an accounting ledger. If you feel that there has to be a repayment for each one in order to "balance the books" you are still living in duality. Look at the ledger you have create for yourself and mark each debt PAID, once and for all!

With the old hurts, wounds and belief systems gone, and clarity about who we are and what's important in your life discovered, it's easier to see your path and direction. Then, when we are no longer lost, our energy signature becomes unique once more, and we are protected by our truth—making it difficult, if not impossible, for anyone or anything outside ourselves to take this away. As we grow in consciousness and expand our possibilities, we begin to see that we are limitless beings capable of moving past fear and creating miracles in our lives. We remember who we are.

The U.S. registered trademark is usually recognized as a basis for common law, or informal trademarking in other countries. It also makes the official trademarking process easier when registering in non-US countries.

In September 2009, when Adamus took over for Tobias, he made it clear that he would only be working with the Crimson Circle and only delivering messages through Geoffrey Hoppe. Adamus stated that he didn't want his message confused by having multiple channelers, and that he was not working with any other groups or individuals as Adamus.

Adamus stated, "I'm going to be bringing my message through Cauldre, the one you know as Geoffrey (Hoppe). I have no desire and I will not do private sessions with other people. I'm choosing Cauldre – as long as he is willing and as long as he stays clear with my message – I'm choosing him to bring this in because I don't want ten, fifteen, twenty different messengers at this time."

The registered Adamus trademark benefits Shaumbra and the Crimson Circle by maintaining the integrity of the Adamus message. As Adamus noted, he will continue working with others as Saint-Germain, but the Saint-Germain message will have a different content and tone than the Adamus channels. We thank everyone for respecting these requests.

A Message From Kryon

By Lee Carroll, Channel for Kryon

Question: Dear Kryon, thank you for your teachings and for touching my heart. Being aware that doubting is an issue for me, I can't help having this question in my mind for some time and I long to receive your comment on this. So let's co-create an answer to my seemingly silly but true question: Am I allowing or am I being lazy? Thank you for your attention and care. - Amsterdam

Answer: Dear one, neither. You are co-creating doubt! Who said that co-creation was always in one direction? Many co-create darkness and negativity, and even depression. It's knowing how powerful you are that is the key.

So... answer this first: Do you believe that you can co-create anything at all? There is actual comedy in this, in that each day you co-create your reality... dark or light. Some of you enhance it daily, telling your cellular structure that you are "never going to make it," and actually giving it directions and a time of demise!

Do you believe that what you think and do can cause reactions in matter and your own cellular structure? If not, then that is your reality, and you have created it very well. If you do believe you can change matter, then you also understand that what you do and say can be designed to start changing your reality. Thousands have done it, so this is not a mystery.

Being lazy is also an issue too! (That's why you asked it) Just like exercise. If you just sit there and do nothing, will "nothing" be the result? The answer is unfortunately, no. Instead the energy of whatever is your reality will reinforce itself and continue. A body in trouble will continue its troubled ways and build upon that scenario until death. A mind without direction will go to the most common level of consciousness, often one that is shaped not by your intent, but by those around you and their influential energy.

Blessed is the Human who asks: "Can I really change things?" That is the Human who is most apt to try to do it! Here are some helpful hints:

1. Start each day with an affirmation out loud so that your own ears hear it, and so it goes right into your cellular structure. Here is a suggested one: "I am a piece of creation. I have created my current reality, and will create all of what I experience in the future. Therefore all that is before is my doing. Today I choose to raise my awareness. Today I choose to slow down the aging clock in my cells, and create divinity in my daily workings. Today I instruct my cellular structure to vibrate to my intent and directions. I create a peaceful balance in all things, everywhere I walk."

2. Never beat yourself up! Everything you say is "heard" by your cells! Even at your lowest ebb, don't do it. Instead, say: "I thank Spirit for giving me the ability to know that all this is temporary. I am peaceful in my power." Then wait for the pendulum of depression or sickness to correct itself. It will.

3. Even if you doubt that you are making a difference, do it! Your duality is built to be biased in these things. Let the results support you. Your intellect will kick into high gear when it sees things changing in your life. Just like exercise... when you start to see the results, you won't doubt it any more!

What's in a Story?

For years, Adamus has been encouraging us to act, role-play and imagine, in order to get out of our limited routines and creations. Lately he's been saying it in another way, inviting us to look at our past – and therefore our future – from a broader perspective and see all the other potentials that are there. I call this rewriting our stories.

Humans communicate through stories. We use them to define our lives, but I believe they were actually meant to create our lives. We think our stories are only reporting on the past, but the truth is that we're actually creating our future with them.

Note this text from the biblical book of John: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. He was with God in the beginning. Through him all things were made; without him nothing was made that has been made." This is really just a fancy way of explaining creation. A story is made of words, the Word is how God creates, and I am God. Therefore, the stories I tell are what create my reality – every bit of it!

So my question is, can we be so bold as to actually re-create our reality by telling a new story about it? You see, when something happens in our lives, we immediately start telling its story. And, human nature being what it is, if we don't like the event, we tend to tell the story more often and with more passion, conveniently forgetting that it was a direct result of some story we'd already been telling – not the other way around! So every time we tell it, especially with interest and passion, it starts the next manifestation of our reality.

Don't believe me? Take a look at any pattern in your life. How much attention have you given it over the years? How often have you pondered it, complained about it, rejoiced over it, etc? The more you tell its story, the more it will express in your life – good or bad.

Or how about this: Make up a brand new story about something you would like. Keep it simple for now, something where you don't have judgments or high expectations. Let's say you love warm bread, fresh out of the oven. Talk about it, think about it, imagine it, smell it, remember times when you've had it – and pretty soon you will create it in your life, because it's a potential you are manifesting by telling the story, by using your creative Word. Why not try it with something a little "bigger?"

So what happens if you experienced a negative event in your past, but now you decide to tell a completely different story about it? Well, the first thing that tends to go away is the drama. But most of us still like our drama. Otherwise, why would we keep telling stories such as "Look what they did! Can you believe how stupid they are?" etc. But if we consciously choose to recreate reality by telling it differently, well, it changes everything.

For instance, there is a woman I know who was raised in unbelievable poverty and isolation. Her family was fundamentalist Christian, steeped in extreme religious dogma, and almost constant control and punishment. She was taught that her body was ugly, that anything that felt good was bad, that God was ashamed of her, and that nearly everyone out in the world would lead her down the wide road to hell. She grew up feeling worthless and guilty, and learned early to give up her own needs and desires "for the good of others." As an adult she spent years in therapy, and still carries the scars of her abusive upbringing.

On the other hand, another friend of mine, who also grew up in a Christian family, lived out a completely different story. She was raised in a home deep in the forest because her mother loved nature and wanted to share it with her children. Her father was a preacher and spiritual seeker at heart, and included the family in his search for a deeper understanding of God. The children knew they were loved, and even though money was scarce there was always healthy food to eat, a rich intellectual environment, and plenty of time together as a family. As this woman grew, she continued her spiritual journey and came to appreciate the deep foundations that had been laid during her childhood.

Now which of these two people do you suppose is living a more balanced and joy-filled life? Well, it all depends on the stories they tell, because they are both me. Each story represents certain facts about my childhood, but it's completely up to me which version I tell, and therefore what current experience I create for myself. In fact, my current reality actually has nothing to do with my past, only my story of the past.

So rather than rehashing old stories that no longer serve us, why not create some new ones? Is it denying reality, or is it finally choosing our reality? Why not tell a story about how easy it is to love and trust yourself; how your abundance is always there exactly when you need it; how every single experience was a beautiful gift; how every choice has brought you to this perfect moment; how people always treat you with respect; how things just always work out somehow... you get the idea. In my life, when I stick to the stories I like and forget about the rest, they really do manifest!!

I invite you to take a look at the stories you tell every day, at the ways you define yourself and your life. Every time you tell a story, you are activating potentials, both of your future as well as your past. So why not activate the ones you really want?

Remember, the Breath must always come before the Word, so take a good deep breath, and tell some new stories about yourself and about the world.

Guided by your Shaumbra Heart and powered by the Breath of God, your stories do create your world. So pay attention to which ones you choose to tell. ☺

Shaumbra Creations

CREATOR – Cindy Hunsinger

CREATION – Play Your Way to Your Best Life, Book & Original Music CD

Feeling completely lost and whining to Adamus about my state, I received a flip and sincere answer to stop taking myself so seriously, to enjoy life, and to be in love with me. He prodded to take action on two lifelong dreams—writing a book and creating a CD of original music. What? Both?! “Yes, and create them at the same time,” he said matter-of-factly. But I’m not a professional singer! “Get over it. You create new energy music, now share it. When you fearlessly commit, you’ll find your voice and own it.”

Okay. What in the world am I going to write about? “Your life from there to here, how you’ve awakened, and how you live authentically empowered.” But, what parts of my life? “The ones that you absolutely don’t want to tell—tell those. You’re not going to process the past, you’re going to review it with benefits, seeing the humor in the hardships and realizing powerful potentials that were activated for you (although you didn’t see them then). Freedom comes when you unlock the door to the ‘concealed wreckage’ from your past. When you go in and feel rather than judge, you discover it was all just experiences, and it doesn’t matter!”

“Create something completely new...combine the music and stories somehow. You’ll figure it out. Remember you’re not trying to be an expert. Just be real as you reveal yourself. Readers will get exactly what is appropriate for them.”

And so, Play Your Way to Your Best Life was created, each chapter sharing the same title with its musical counterpart. Together they awaken true heart energies (potentials) that supersede mental perceptions of limitation. This documents one Shaumbra’s intimate journey, shedding past crud and allowing a spunky, sensual best self to emerge from the magic of creativity.

CREATION – The Mystery of Cancer

This is the dream. You enter a bookstore in search of a book with an unusual title: The Mystery of Cancer. Walking through the aisles, you stare at the countless books, wondering if you have the title right. The shelves are like a maze, the volume of books seems endless. Just as you are about to give up, you suddenly see it. Reaching up, you pull the book off the shelf, turning it over to examine the cover. It looks familiar. Beneath the title is the name of the author. It is your name. You awaken.

We are searching in the wrong places for a cure to cancer. There is no cure 'out there'; it lies 'in here'—within our consciousness. We are lost in a battlefield, deluded by the belief that cancer is something to kill. Cancer is not a war; it is a communications problem. The dream is as real as the book you hold and a reminder that life is about making choices. Most importantly, The Mystery of Cancer will encourage you to enter the mystery and create the health you desire.

The book is subtitled 'The Alchemy of Healing'. Alchemy is the transformation and movement of energy. Most of us do not truly understand energy and how closely it works with consciousness. The connection between New Energy and consciousness has become a very intimate one. For those with diseases such as cancer, a deeper understanding of the new energy offers more potentials for healing.

CREATION – Breathing in Israel (CD)

Conscious breathing with our essence is one of the most empowering, simple and effective tools that we naturally carry within ourselves. Before and after the Shouds Norma Delaney facilitates this breath, and for over 10 years Adamus, Tobias and Kuthumi have been talking about the importance of breathing, each time inviting us to take this deep breath with them.

This unique CD combines conscious breathing with new energy music in two extended breathing sessions.

The first session, called "Embodying Your Breath," is an invitation to sink deeper into our body to be able to breathe and receive our "solid breath." Then we can allow this breath to expand through our entire body and cells. This session is lead by Erno van Doesselaar (in English) and accompanied by Yanna Volfinzon on piano.

The second session, called "Dancing Home," is a deep invitation for more of our Spirit to come dancing home within us. It is a unique breathing session lead by Yanna Volfinzon in the beginning (5 minutes partially in Hebrew), followed by Erno van Doesselaar (in English) with intuitive play on the piano by Yanna Volfinzon.

Erno van Doesselaar and Yanna Volfinzon have been certified Crimson Circle Teachers and certified New Breath Teachers for more than four years.
