Farewell to a Pioneer

BY GEOFFREY HOPPE

Where were you when you heard that Steve Jobs died? I was in Paris on the front end of the Tour de Love when I heard the news. It didn't come as a surprise to me because Jobs had been ill with pancreatic cancer for several years and he recently resigned as CEO of Apple. But for me it came as a sad moment because of the impact he had on me personally as well as on human consciousness.

Steve Jobs was my hero. I bought my first Apple product almost 25 years ago. At the time I owned a marketing consulting company in Dallas and it was natural for creative companies to use Apple products. My technical and financial acquaintances scoffed at the "toy" and suggested that I get a real computer, but I quickly became an Apple devotee, a Mac junkie, a Jobs follower. I've been using them ever since – and rather smugly, I admit. Now all but one of the Crimson Circle staff uses a Mac, even the ones who initially swore they'd never switch from the PC world.

I like Apple products because they're intuitive. I've never read a manual or taken a class. Jobs was emphatic about the design and human interface features of Apple products, so that a user could simply flip on the switch and dive into the experience, whether the product was a Mac desktop or laptop computer, or the new line of personal empowerment products such as the iPhones and iPads.

I felt very connected to Steve Jobs, something I don't think I can say about any other corporate CEO. We were both born in 1955. Jobs was a college drop-out... so was I. I lived in Mountain View, California from late 1973 – 1976. During that exact time Steve Jobs and Steve Wozniak (his Apple co-founder) were building the first Apple computer in Jobs' parents garage just a few miles away. Jobs was thrown out of his company in 1985; I was relieved of duties (i.e. fired) from the company I co-founded.

Jobs returned to Apple in 1996 and eventually turned it into one of the most successful companies in history. Apple is reported to have more cash reserves than the US government, and a larger net worth than most countries in the world.

What I truly admired about Jobs was that he was a maverick, a non-conformist, a visionary and a New Thinker. The traditional business world I came from was over-MBA'ed, over-suited, over-managed and overly-focused on the bottom line rather than the Heart Line.

Jobs was given up for adoption at birth. Like many of us, he chose the fast lane to come back to this planet to be part of the greatest shift in history. Like us, he wanted to be part of the first wave so he grabbed one of the first available physical bodies, consequences be damned. He was raised by Protestant parents but came to accept concepts such as reincarnation, karma and multi-dimensional realities after visiting India in his 20's. He considered himself somewhat of a Buddhist, he was vegetarian, and was said to have "imagined" his products rather than mentally engineered them. Adamus once mentioned that some of Jobs' non-physical entourage included Nikolai Tesla and Alexander Graham Bell.

I'm sure you've heard more than enough about Steve Jobs since he transitioned on October 5, but I couldn't help writing an article about it in this issue of Shaumbra Monthly because I've always felt that there was a bit of Shaumbra in him. Crimson Circle consultant Alain Bolea, a PC user by practice but an Apple fan by heart, wrote to me on the day of Jobs' death saying, "A bright light has gone out today." Goodbye for now, Steve, and if you happen to be in the area please stop by one of our monthly meetings.

A Life-Changing Experience

By Jean Tinder

Early on the morning of September 7, my husband Joep and I loaded up the car and headed down the road to Santa Fe. We were both working at the conference and Thursday was set-up day, so we wanted to get there the night before. I have helped at the Midsummer Conferences since 2005, and every single year it was one of the most exciting events I could remember. But this time was different.

Previous conferences have been fun and I always looked forward to them, but over the last couple of years I guess you could say I'd lost some interest in life. It's an interesting feeling – and I know many of you know it well – to feel you've reached the completion of your life's purpose. There just isn't a lot of motivation left, and even things that used to excite me, such as big Shaumbra gatherings, no longer had such special meaning. I was basically content just keeping busy doing a job I enjoy.

Even my body had been responding to my ambivalence and lack of excitement about life with more aches, pains and general weariness. So when we left for Santa Fe that morning, I wasn't particularly excited. There would be a lot of work to do, which I enjoyed. There would be people to see, which would be nice. There would be channels and presentations, but I wondered if they would say anything new. And then it would be time to pack up and come back home. No big deal.

But when the conference started, the opening message from Adamus piqued my interest. He talked about how those of us attending had made the clear choice that our ascension or spiritual completion is now our only option. Hmm, something I could relate to! The rest of the day was interesting and fun, particularly when the mariachi band unexpectedly came prancing in during one of the sessions. The audience enjoyed inspiring messages from Awakening Zone hosts Wulfgang von Rohr, Jean Adrienne and Joe Rumbolo, and a beautiful message from Zapharia channeled by Lee Harris.

Then after dinner it was time to party! The Jimmy Stadler band was in fine form, this being their third Shaumbra event, and they rocked the house for three hours. For me personally, it was a magical evening. Because I didn't three hours. For me personally, it was a magical evening. Because I didn't really care any more, it was probably the first time I actually danced like no one was watching. I didn't care if I looked foolish, didn't care who else was out there, didn't care if I had the right moves or even the right rhythm. I just danced the night away with myself – and was completely out of my usually-very-busy mind. Now and then I had the feeling that something deep inside was releasing, letting go, but I didn't care and didn't want to think about it. I just wanted to keep moving.

On Saturday there were more great presentations. I particularly enjoyed how Dee Wallace demonstrated working – and not working – with conscious choice. Sandra Ingerman talked about shamanism, even taking us on an inner journey with her drumming. Norma and Garret shared about their recent experiences with listening to self and taking the time to deal with the aspects, whether it seems “practical” in the moment or not. Then Kuthumi, with his usual love and humor, introduced “New Think” and led the audience through a wonderful experience of actually feeling it. It has been my experience that when Kuthumi leads something like that, it goes really deep – and this was no exception. (And it helped me ‘get’ Adamus’ message in October at a whole new level.)

Then it was Sunday morning, September 11, the 10th anniversary of the 9/11. Lee Harris sang a very beautiful rendition of Angel while images played across the screen. The energy was thick and full. Then it was time for the annual Inspire Consciousness award, given each year to a worthy recipient for their contribution to inspiring consciousness around the world. This time it was given to David McMaster, much his surprise and the audience's approval.

Jim Self was next, and I have to say that listening to him is almost like listening to a channel. He doesn't attribute it to any other entity, but the words, energy and wisdom just keep pouring out. And all at once he said something that went past every conscious or unconscious barrier within me, into my core. “How long have you wanted to go home? This IS home.” Those simple words, saying something we've all heard for years, started an avalanche inside.

"This is home. I am home. If I leave, it won't be to go home. Home is here. Home is right now." I can't even describe all the pieces that fell into place in that moment. Of course we've heard it all before, but the combination of everything about the weekend – the messages and the experiences – somehow let everything drop into place. It was one of those "outside of time" moments, and it stayed with me even as the conference went on with Dr. Brandt, then the 'panel channel' with Lee Harris, Norma Delaney, Jim Self, and the closing message from Adamus. In fact, it was Adamus' words that best reflected what I was feeling inside. "What we went through the last couple days, in terms of a shift in you and creating a shift in the potentials of humanity, was profound."

Then it was all over and time to pack up again. The entire bunch of staff and volunteers is an incredible team and everyone worked together to get it done in a record amount of time. Finally it was time to have dinner and relax, and we all met in the hotel bar. Anyone who was there will tell you that those few hours in that little room Sunday night were nothing short of incredible. With about 30-40 Shaumbra crowded into the small room, connecting, celebrating, laughing and talking, it was literally crackling with energy! It felt like all barriers were gone. Everyone's energy was wide open, free, expanding and flowing – a truly magical way to end a profound weekend.

That night and on our journey home the next day, I felt something I hadn't felt for more than two years – a deep excitement about life!! I was finally, very consciously and with full awareness, choosing life in every way, breathing it in, and opening up to being here – home at last.

And you know what's interesting? I could feel the difference immediately – and still do! My body is reinvigorating itself, my mind is clearer, I have more energy (almost too much to sleep at times), and things are moving again. I no longer feel tired or overwhelmed with life, and the ambivalence is gone, replaced by a peace, joy and eagerness to experience whatever is next.

I went to the Midsummer Conference expecting nothing, and came home with everything.

DEATH & THE ASTRAL REALMS

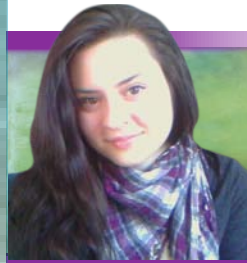

Geoffrey & Linda recently presented a new teleclass on "Death and the Astral Realms," where they talked about what happens before, at the moment of death, and what the soul experiences in the days and weeks following their transition. It's a great overview of the material we've learned from Adamus and Tobias, and an excellent presentation for anyone who is curious about what really happens when you die.

The audio recording and text transcript from this special session are now available free of charge in Shaumbra Shoppe.

BIRTHING INTO THIS LIFETIME

By Cosmina Coman

I've been playing in the realms of Adoula, of transitioning through birthing, with Adamus Saint-Germain's DreamWalker Birth (DWB) course.

For me it was particularly hard to feel the Tube. What is the Tube? Well, it is this brilliant thing, vortex, device, dimension, one-way passage from the celestial realms to Earth. We come to Earth and get birthed through this incredible thing!

So part of my assignment while doing DWB was to feel the Tube that I loathed. Even when I heard the word I started rolling my eyes, feeling the chaos in there. My head hurt. I had a lot of resistance. I was expecting a horrible night with panicking and anxiety because we were asked to remember and to relive the experiences of the slowing down of our angelic energies.

I believe this experience has been the single most incredible thing I have ever felt. When I went to sleep I had resistance to going into the dream world. I knew I would remember the Tube. But SURPRISE!! I haven't felt myself that calm, clear and surrounded with so much light and love in months, during my sleep time. This was the most peaceful and deep sleep of the last two years of my life! And I asked myself, what was that? How can that be? I expected horror and instead, I lived a calm, aware dream state that felt like it had a lot of the pink color in it. I was to find later that those were the Eesa energies, the energies that facilitate the birthing process.

And today as I was going through the rest of the material it came to me, the knowingness was there: I simply chose this lifetime. That's why it was so easy and graceful! I was prepared! I wanted it! I had the tools! The Tube can be a wonderful celestial womb IF you go through a series of cleansing and other preparations beforehand.

And most importantly, I got to recreate and relive my birth!! There is nothing I can say here that can do justice to what I experienced, so I will share some of the impressions I wrote immediately after the experience. I re-experienced the journey from the moment I decided to come to Earth to the moment I was here as an angel in a tiny human body.

I felt my Self slowing down my vibration. It was very uncomfortable in the chest, in the breath, slowing down, descending, feeling more and more powerless, but experiencing it with myself, not alone, not doing it for them, not for karma here, not for anyone else. I am here for me. I am It for me. I greet them. I am the One who Greets Them (my parents).

I felt the fear of my mother. She felt so alone. She did not feel me. She did not hear me when I said to her, Breathe with Me, Breathe with me Mother. But nonetheless I am a miracle. I am the miracle of life. She did not know what she would get but I knew why I was here; I knew what this lifetime was going to be about.

I came here for me. Yes! I am the miracle of birth, of life!! Slowing down once more, slowing down, painfully, constricting so hard, so harsh, but compassionately and with so much love and honor for the experience of becoming a New Energy Human. I am IT.

I am rebirthing in this Now Moment, being conscious that I chose this Lifetime, that I choose everything for me To Be Me here and now at this time for the celebration of Becoming and Being. I no longer fear, but know I am here now because I choose it. I am choosing life once more, celebrating the miracle of an angel slowing down her vibration in such a way that she becomes matter. As I birthed once more, I wiggled my feet and my hands and my nose, just like a newborn. I am here Now. Yes I Am.

Namaste my friends!

P.S: The Dreamwalker Birth Transition is an amazing, incredible adventure! Do try it if your heart expands when you read these words.

Shaumbra Heartbeat

By Jean Tinder, Shaumbra Monthly editor

Do you feel it?

Something big is going on. Throughout this year, in many, many countries around the world and now in the U.S., people are saying "Enough." There is a cry rising from human hearts that says, "We are sovereign beings and we will not be controlled and abused any more."

When I glance at the news online, sense people's energy at shops in town, or just feel "out there" into the world, I feel a growing excitement. Sure, there is fear and drama and all the issues that people have been dealing with, but there's something more too. Something new and fresh, something beginning to stir, like a seed that's lain dormant for a very long time. It's a rumbling of something like patriotism, but has nothing to do with any particular country; something like hope, but with not a shred of doubt or chance of failure; something like excitement but inside there is peace. It's as if we have finally arrived at our destination, manifested our dream on Earth, and now all that's left is to watch it unfold before our eyes.

Perhaps that's where this came from:

Ladies and Gentlemen, on behalf of your captain I would like to thank you for flying with us today and be the first to welcome you to the New World. We know it has been a very long and arduous flight across the universe with a great deal of turbulence along the way. As you could see by looking out the windows, we passed through some heavy storms, and yes, we did get hit by lightning more than once. But this vehicle was built with great care and designed to withstand just about anything, so in spite of the unexpected turbulence, drama and storms, all is well.

We also sincerely apologize for the rough landing. As you no doubt noticed, our approach toward the airstrip the last few years involved some tight maneuvers through the driving rain, sleet and fog of mass consciousness, which reduced visibility to almost zero. However, since all of us have become very good at instrument flying by feel, there was never really any danger. The rather bumpy landing was due to high-speed crosswinds at ground level, but your breathing and trust created a durable cushion of air so touchdown was without incident.

CRIMSON CIRCLE BLOG

Staying in touch will soon be even easier!

The Crimson Circle is preparing to launch our very own blog. It will be populated with past and current newsletter articles, announcements and reminders, quick updates from Geoff & Linda while they are traveling, relevant science articles, and much more. There might even be an occasional note from Adamus in between the monthly Shouds.

You will be able to subscribe to the blog through rss feeds, Facebook, Twitter and more. All this will make it easier to share articles and messages you enjoy, find past postings, and keep up-to-date on what's happening with the Crimson Circle around the world.

We will officially launch the Blog at the November Shoud, so make sure to tune in!

We know you're very excited to be at the end of your long journey and are anxious to get out and explore this New World. You will be able to do so very soon, but right now we ask that you please remain in your seat with your seatbelt fastened and breathe as we taxi to the terminal. The plane is still being buffeted by high winds and we don't want you getting any last minute bruises.

Also, please use extreme caution when opening the over-head bins. You can be certain that items have shifted around up there in your head during the flight and you should avoid injuring yourself or those around you while trying to retrieve them. In fact, you may find it easier to simply leave your tattered old luggage and belief systems with us and enjoy some of the wonderful local shops where you can easily acquire many brand new items of your choice.

We appreciate your patience and cooperation during this record-breaking flight. We know many of you never expected to participate in managing the in-flight services or even occasionally helping to recalculate the flight path (since it is the first of its kind). However, thanks to our collaborative efforts, we finally made it to our destination safely and slightly ahead of schedule.

Please enjoy your stay here in the New World, and wherever else your travels may take you. Your Home-based flight crew will be deplaning along with you and we look forward to seeing you around town and enjoying the sights, sounds and experiences right along with you.

As we approach the terminal, please keep the aisles clear so we can come through one last time to collect any remaining items you no longer need. It has been our pleasure serving you on ShaumbraAir, and we appreciate your cooperation, collaboration and support.

Now, forget about the long flight, stretch your legs, watch your head as you stand up, and exit in an orderly fashion. Please note that everyone on this flight has received prior security clearance and there will be no need to pass through immigrations. Simply follow the signs to the arrivals hall where you will find ground transportation and other Master services immediately available. You are free to play, shop, create, meet and greet your fellow travelers, go forth and have fun.

One final word: We have just received notice that the baggage claim carousels are no longer functioning. Unfortunately, that means any baggage you checked and stowed will simply be incinerated. You didn't really need it anyway.

Welcome to the New World. The local Standard time is Now and all is well.

CREATION — 2065 In the Beginning

“Over thirty years have passed since the sudden blast of universal understanding changed everything. People worldwide have dropped the money standard to join in living and learning Pods where food and energy are locally grown, resources are shared, and creativity is celebrated. And the higher capabilities—clairvoyance, clairsaudience, telepathy, and teleportation are gradually becoming the norm.

Share the adventures of ten-year-old Jeori Kellogg as his life gradually intertwines with his telepathic and outgoing neighbor, Kayla, and teenagers Cleo and Kadrin. It is to the loner Kadrin—dubbed Mr. Black by his pod mates—that the forces of darkness first come, threatening his life and sanity. As threads of fear from ages past begin to insidiously spread throughout the world, it is Kad who holds the key to Earth’s future.”

Besides presenting an engaging and surprising view of a probable future, “2065 In the Beginning” contains ideas for personal and planetary healing, a view back to the “before time” of manipulation and fear, and how we got from here to there.

“2065 In the Beginning” takes place after the quantum leap of consciousness has put an end to wars, judgment, and duality. Feeling the God Within and the interconnectedness of all life, most people have chosen to live in small communities of like-minded others where individual choice, creative excitement and mutual respect are center points. Creations by the podmembers, food, clothing and energy are shared freely in-house and with surrounding communities. Like New Energy itself, the Pods are fluid entities, and children and adults are free to move on to different Pods to experience new subject areas and ways of living at will. By 2065 everyone is also evolving towards clairvoyance, clairsaudience, telepathy, and traveling interdimensionally.

CREATION – Dance with me & with Kuthumi Lal Singh

Piano channeled CD, with Yanna Volfinzon and Kuthumi Lal Singh, channeled by Erno Van Doesselaar.

In 2011 we started to work closely with Kuthumi Lal Singh, an Ascended Master who loves celebrating life and human beings in a very brilliant and magnificent way.

His humor and simplicity with absolute pure and unique wisdom is coming through in this CD, each and every time that we are co-operating with him. His special love for music can be felt through the piano CD. And most important this is an energy CD – a lot of divine energy pouring in – if you allow yourself to feel.

Kuthumi invited me to bring the expression of the whole me, the Grand me! He invited me to play and to dance and to discover more about him and me while playing on the piano, feeling and testing the notes, like testing a great meal, each note feels different and special and bringing something new and different to the whole composition.

So smell it, taste it, breathe it and drink it in, as it is a grand and unique CD that invites each and every one of us to be who we truly are, to celebrate life and the true Magnificent US!

CREATOR – Ali Maxfield

CREATION – “Spirit is Present” wristbands

Adamus first mentioned that Spirit is Present in the July, 2011 Shoud and he also suggested that t-shirts, hats, and bumper stickers would be a good idea. I had an intuition and it felt like a fun project, so I created these wristbands as simple reminders that Spirit is Present for Shaumbra. The type is raised on a red wristband and they also include a spiral before the words SPIRIT IS PRESENT.
